LUCINDA WILLIAMS RELEASES THE POIGNANT “BIG BLACK TRAIN” FROM HER NEW ALBUM GOOD SOULS BETTER ANGELS OUT APRIL 24

THE CELEBRATED SINGER/SONGWRITER SHEDS LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT OF DEPRESSION WITH TENDERNESS AND COMPASSION LISTEN HERE

Nashville, TN – Multi-Grammy Award winner Lucinda Williams addresses a subject that affects millions with the release of her emotional new song, “Big Black Train”. The track appears on her highly anticipated new album Good Souls Better Angels, out April 24th via Highway 20/Thirty Tigers.

The song’s title works as a metaphor for depression, and Williams compassionately articulates some of the fears and feelings that engulf those who are affected by it. Through lyrics such as, I can hear it comin’ from miles away, Last time through it took me far away, Didn’t know if I was ever comin’ back and the solemn plea, I don’t wanna get on board, Williams masterfully connects the emotional weight of the condition to the overwhelming power of the “Big Black Train”.
