

THE NEW YORKER

By Bill McKibben

December 17, 2020

ANNALS OF A WARMING PLANET

OUR STUFF WEIGHS MORE THAN ALL LIVING THINGS ON THE PLANET

WARMING UP

David Huckfelt is a Midwestern folksinger who has been involved in the increasingly desperate fight to stop the construction of Line 3, a tar-sands pipeline that would cut across Minnesota. His new single, “Book of Life,” is dedicated to “the Indigenous water protectors standing up and speaking out for Mother Earth all across Turtle Island.” While you listen, you can also read the new report from the Rainforest Action Network detailing precisely what banks are behind this baleful project. Taken together, you might find yourself moved to join people such as these and these, who spent last week asking bank branches to request that their head offices cease and desist from bankrolling such projects.