“...one of the UK’s most authentic americana stars.” – Holler

Nashville, TN – Today, Our Man In The Field, the musical pseudonym of British singer/songwriter Alex Ellis, releases “How Long,” the newest track from his upcoming album Gold on the Horizon, out November 3. Gold on the Horizon is the sophomore album from OMITF and finds Ellis musings on life and all its nuances. Watch the “How Long” video HERE, listen via DSPs HERE and pre-order Gold on the Horizon HERE.

“How Long” finds Ellis lamenting the lack of civility in the media, politics and in public life. He shares, “I’m more or less glass half full kind of person so I usually feel content that however bad things get or however far away from my preferred position society moves, it’ll pass and at some point, we’ll move back towards the middle and it’ll get easier. It seems like we’ve been waiting a long time for that now.”

Our Man in the Field is currently touring the UK, and additional dates are in the works. Shows are listed below and ticket info can be found on the website HERE. Produced and mixed by Tucker Martine (Modest Mouse, Rosanne Cash, case/lang/veirs), Gold on the Horizon was recorded in December 2021 at Flora Recording and Playback in Portland, OR. The album features 11 songs that range from the raw and barren in “Come Back To Me” – which showcases Ellis’s soulful vocal harmonies and a sparse arrangement of acoustic guitar and pedal steel – to the spacious mirror ball slow-dance of “Go Easy,” and a full and striding desert noir feel of horns, backup vocals, and baritone guitar through the album opener “Feel Good.” What informs Ellis and Gold on the Horizon is a lifetime of inspiration and the creative space to “wait for something magical to happen.”
