– UNCUT

Nashville, TN – Today, celebrated singer/songwriter/multi-instrumentalist Dylan LeBlanc releases the title track from his long-awaited new album Coyote, a semi-autobiographical concept album centered on the character of Coyote, a man on the run from his past. Coyote is out October 20th via ATO Records. Watch the “Coyote” video HERE and pre-order Coyote HERE.

“Coyote” kicks off the album and sets the first scene for the main character who is trying to find his way out of poverty and goes to work in the criminal underworld of Mexico. The song includes an ode to Santa Muerte, a saint often worshipped by cartels as they pray for safe passage during their illegal endeavors. LeBlanc explains the titular character further when he says, “Coyote is a man whose name is derived from being a loner within a pack. And it explains the kind of man he is inside his own desperation and circumstances.”

Though far removed from a perilous life like Coyote’s, LeBlanc admits he still feels as if he is dancing on a razor’s edge all the same. A vagabond since he was a little boy tossed between Texas, Louisiana and Alabama, LeBlanc has experienced his share of addiction, anger and violence. But while he has endured hardships, LeBlanc’s success is an example of what can be earned through grit and determination. Coyote follows several acclaimed albums which earned LeBlanc raves across the board, including praise from NPR Music, Rolling Stone, American Songwriter, No Depression and more.

Coyote finds LeBlanc producing for the first time, teaming up with a group of all-star musicians that includes drummer Fred Eltringham (Ringo Starr, Sheryl Crow), pianist Jim “Moose” Brown (Bob Seger), and bass player Seth Kaufman (Lana Del Rey). LeBlanc heads to Europe this fall for the first round of Coyote tour dates before performing in the U.S. in early 2024. European tour dates can be found below and on his website HERE.
