“...much like the roots of rock music itself, the core sources of her sound — country, blues, folk — converge into the heart of it all, as if to say: she’s not just a vein of rock and roll; she’s in its blood.” – NPR Music

Nashville, TN – Pioneering, multi-Grammy winning artist Lucinda Williams has released her soul-bearing, inspirational new song “We’ve Come Too Far To Turn Around,” featuring multi-Grammy winner Norah Jones on piano and harmony vocals. The track appears on Williams’ forthcoming album World’s Gone Wrong (out January 23rd), a hard-hitting wake-up call and a battle cry as a response to the socio-political chaos surrounding us.

“We’ve Come Too Far to Turn Around” is a deeply moving, soul-bearing anthem of endurance in the face of hardship, injustice and moral struggle while upholding an unwavering resolve to continue forward. The narrator refuses to succumb to hatred or division but instead exudes resilience and spiritual fortitude. Jones’ and Williams’ soaring vocals offer a breathtaking finale to the album. World’s Gone Wrong is a raw and unapologetic set of songs that were written and recorded with a sense of urgency. Throughout nine original tracks, Williams offers songs that do not just chronicle our times but challenge us to rise above them. A timely cover of Bob Marley’s “So Much Trouble In The World” features a captivating duet with the incomparable Mavis Staples.

On World’s Gone Wrong, Williams finds beauty, grit, and grace in a world on edge. The album reaffirms Williams’ place as one of the most vital and uncompromising voices in American music.
